

Press Release

Pennex Aluminum was named the 2013 Manufacturing Award winner in the Community Service category. Pennex is a community leader because of its proud employees who care deeply for the community. After nearly 10 years as a gold contributor to the United Way campaign, in 2012, Pennex was a pacesetter for the 2013 campaign, for which 63% of employees contributed and nine leadership-level employees gave more than $1,000. The company also hosts a charity golf outing every May to benefit the New Hope Ministries and holds a food and toy drive every winter holiday season to benefit the underprivileged in its community. These events are in addition to countless other selfless acts completed by employees throughout the year, such as collections of school supplies to the local elementary school, charity walks for wellness and participation in the Wellsville fall float parade, among other activities.

The award was given by MANTEC, the resource for manufacturers in South Central Pennsylvania and the Central Penn Business Journal. The award criteria included having an impact that reaches far beyond the walls of its facility. Finalists in this category demonstrate a broad and deep commitment to serving its community, reflected by company policy, resources and/or employee participation and are an example of the giving spirit of our region's manufacturers.
